Captured a Large Still

Last Thursday, about two miles north of Fairfield, Marshal Peacock and Collector Stickney captured, loaded into their wagon and brought to Ocala the biggest illicit whisky still that probably was ever captured in this terri-

It is a regulation copper still of about 120 gallons capacity, and the cap, flake and worm were all found near by hidden in a pond. The still was charged with a barrel of corn mash and five more were standing by ready for distilling, all of which was destroyed. The still is the property of old man Dick Curry and his confederates, and its existence has been known to the authorities for many years. The still has been in operation for a number of years, and, from the worn look of the apparatus, has done faithful service.

Dick Curry, white, has been before Judge Williams on several occasions for selling and manufacturing whiskey, and has paid a fine and served out a term in jail, but heretofore his place of operations could not be found.

Messrs. Peacock and Stickney did not get away any too soon with the still after finding it, as they heard numbers of signals about in the woods, in the vicinity of the still, evidently made by members of the gang, who were

The still, as it is set up in Mr. Stickney's office, is an object of great interest, and has been paid many visits. The gentlemen are justly proud of their capture, which is of vastly more importance than the average small and primitive illicit distilling apparatus.
